

Journeyland presents

The Living village

A two day gathering for land based living

A more connected way of living

The Living Village aspires to bring together people who are ready to co-create healthier, more connected ways of living.

Our gathering is rooted in self-responsibility, mutual care, ecological awareness, and a shared commitment to stewarding land and community.

Our Living Purpose

- Inspire and mobilize a local ecovillage initiative
- Share practical knowledge, from zoning, design, governance, construction and more
- Build relationships among aligned individuals and organizations
- Strengthen Journeyland's vision and community
- Gather input and identify potential stewards for next phase

Two Day Gathering

A gathering to convene and explore the practical, cultural, and ecological foundations of building a local ecovillage in the London region. The program blends workshops, storytelling, hands-on learning, and community dialogue.

The event will attract people interested in living closer to the land, local leaders, community organizers, growers, builders, creatives, and others who value cooperation and shared stewardship.

A participatory immersion that blends connecting with the land and each other, storytelling, and practical skill-building.

Hear from ecovillage leaders, join workshops on ecovillage design, and participate in hands-on demos like natural building and permaculture.

Pollinating the Future

Pollination is one of the most important ecological services. Bees, butterflies, birds, and bats help plants reproduce, supporting the food supply and plant diversity.

Let us learn from our relatives, and join in the natural cycles of life.

A delicate dance of nature.

By planting our collective vision, we can ensure that the land and our community continues to bloom.

Honouring Reciprocity

Our current economy treats money and time as the main units of exchange. Nature works differently: exchange is reciprocal, seasonal, and woven into place.

Let's work together, like nature does.

A collective effort

At registration people choose a pathway (contribution of time/skills/goods/currency) and state what they'll give and what they'd like back. Contributions flow into a shared Reciprocity Pool that first covers essential overhead, then supports land stewardship, and finally redistributes value back to community.

How to get involved

We all have a role to play in participating, bringing practical skills, sharing cultural knowledge, and offering lived experience, so we may learn together.

There will be opportunities to join leadership circles, so we can take our learnings, and start to take action towards our collective vision.
